

From: prue acton
To: letters@smh.com.au
Date: 2 Jun 2010 14:25
Letter to the Editor

If PM Rudd and Senator Wong, CFMEU boss Micheal O'Conner, and Premiers Keneally, Brumby and Bartlett think they can ask the Australian people to believe that burning native forest wood for electricity is less carbon polluting than dirty coal they should think again!

Logging forests creates almost 10% of Australia's Green House Gases.
Best solution: stop logging for woodchips and don't even think about burning for power.

Not clean, not green and not renewable.